GEORGE RUTH IS CHEAP ENOUGH AT $100,000

(BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.)
New York, May 16.—There was nothing startling in the announcement from Boston that several offers of very high figures had been made to George Ruth, elephantine southpaw of the Red Sox. In fact, the announcement that Ruth had been offered $100,000 for his services was almost a surprise, for it was known that the inner circles of baseball.

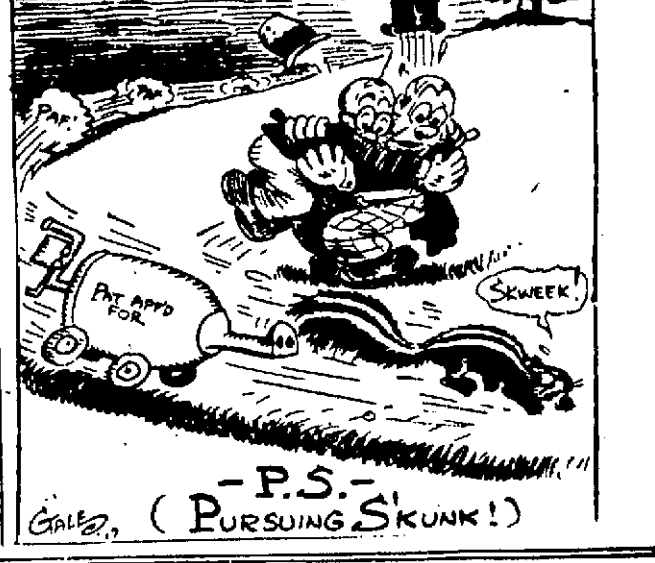

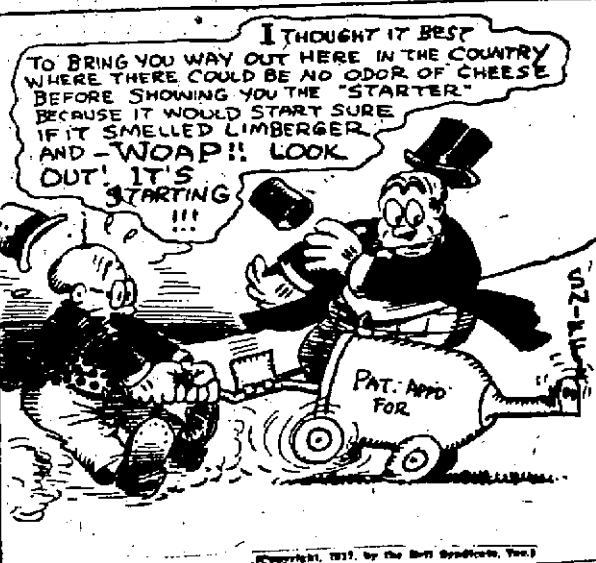

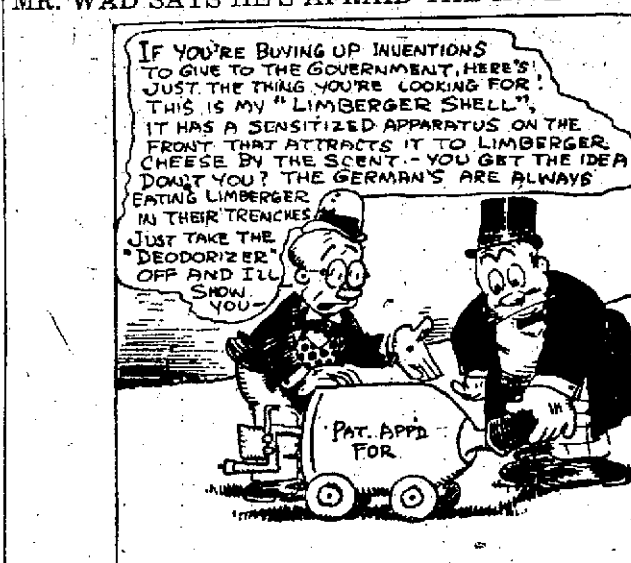

As baseball values have come to be known of late the price offered for it is extremely doubtful if there is a player in baseball so valuable. And this statement takes in the batting power and worth lies in his batting power and worth lies in his batting power and worth lies in his batting power.

Ruth broke into big league baseball from the International league, where he was a pupil of Jack Dunn. He was sent to organized baseball for an amateur nine representing a Baltimore academy, where Ruth had been placed as an orphan. Dunn was forced into the courts to get Ruth's signature to a contract and had him appointed guardian of the coming star.

In his first year as member of one of the best power AA teams in the country, Ruth won twenty-two games and lost nine. His average, figured from standpoint of earned runs, was 2.33. With the Boston club, having been purchased just before the close of the International league season, and won two and lost one game for the Red Sox. The price paid for him was said to be $2,700. During his next year in the big league he won eighteen and lost seven and since that time has been improving.

Ruth may not be a better hitter than Cobb, but there is no doubt that he is one of the strongest hitters the

TEXAS TROOPS REGULAR ATTENDANTS AT GAMES

Dallas, Tex., May 16.—Whether the presence in Texas of more than a score of military camps with their thousands of soldiers will save the Texas league from the fate of other minor leagues which have been able to withstand the unusual conditions caused by the war is still an open question a month after the opening of the playing season.

The Texas league was one of the few minor leagues which did not disband last year after a season of poor attendance attributed in part to the war. The managers were strong in the hope that professional baseball would have enough appeal to the men in the military camps to make it a profitable venture during the 1918 season.

The league was hard hit by the draft, lost many of its good players and had to pay higher salaries for those it kept. But after much consideration, Beaumont and Galveston were eliminated from the circuit, the best of their men apportioned among the other teams.

The men in khaki are attending ball games whenever they are able, but nevertheless the men are in the camps for work and not for entertainment and it is said some of the club owners have been disappointed in attendance figures. The soldiers rarely have a week day during which they are at liberty while on Sundays they are often so occupied with personal business that many are unwilling to spend the afternoon at a ball park. Managers say, however, that when the men are at liberty they are attending in a most satisfactory manner.

The six cities in the league are Dallas, Houston, Waco, Fort Worth, San Antonio, and Shreveport. All have army camps except Shreveport. Hamilton Patterson, manager of the Dallas team, who has just returned from the opening tour, said the attendance has been satisfactory.

1918 RACING SEASON IN UNIONTOWN OPENS TODAY

(BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.)
Uniontown, Pa., May 16.—The opening gun of the 1918 automobile racing season was fired when the leading drivers of the country appeared on the speedway here today.

The feature event was the Liberty Sweepstakes, 120 laps. The United States Automobile Association put up $15,000 in twenty attractive prizes for the drivers in this race. In addition the winner will get the universal trophy, a magnificent solid silver cup standing thirty-six inches high and measuring fifty-two inches around the base.

SEASON HAS OPENED FOR HOOK AND LINE

Opening Date for Taking Large and Small Mouthed Black Bass However, Will Not Open Until May 29th.

There seems to be a general misunderstanding as to the opening date of the hook and line fishing in Wisconsin. In response to inquiries from local fishermen replies have been received from the State Conservation Commission which have arisen. It is stated in the communications received that the open season for hook and line fishing opened May 1st instead of May 29th as it has in former years. This is due to the fact that the open season for hook and line fishing is now open for black bass, sturgeon and muskellunge.

The letter received by local rod and reel experts follows: * May 1, 1918. "Chapter 128, laws of 1917, particularly specifies that in the years 1917 and 1918, the open season for the hook and line fishing in Wisconsin (residents only) shall open on May 1 instead of May 29 for the taking of black bass, sturgeon and muskellunge. This is also to advise us to the opening date for the taking of black bass as covered by section (1A) and (1B) on page 40. Section (1A) provides that the open season for large and small mouthed black bass shall be June 15. Section (1B) provides that the opening date for Oswego bass, green bass, and yellow bass shall be May 29. The conflict of the law lies in the fact that both of these sections (1A) and (1B) cover the same kinds of fish on different dates. For instance, the large mouthed black bass is the same fish as the Oswego bass and the green bass. The small mouthed black bass is the same fish as the yellow bass. Under these conditions we are advised by the department of Attorney General that the courts always give a law a broad construction and interpretation and if there is any doubt the benefit of the doubt is given the public.

"You will therefore understand that the opening date for the taking of large and small mouthed black bass opens on May 29, as they are the same fish known as Oswego bass, green bass, and yellow bass."

State Conservation Commission, Secretary.

MORRIS MILLER

D'ya ever know it to fail—take two high class boxers, match them for an important bout, laud the possibilities of the contest to the azure heights of heaven, sit back to enjoy a rare treat in the stadium—are—and—wow! what a disaster!

So it was when Pauley McFarland and Mike Gibbons were matched in the memorable affair at Brighton Beach.

So it was when Jess Willard and Frank Moran clashed in New York. And so it was when Jack Dempsey and Billie Miske came together in St. Louis last night. These young fellows had been stepping along like thoroughbreds, knocking their opponents cold with one punch, winning with a distressing regularity and with a convincing chatter about "championships." But what was the result when they collided in an "elimination bout"? The tamed, most coolheaded of the famous, that was ever taken out and paraded before an array of little fans.

If there was a shade any way or other Dempsey had it. The popular "knockdown" man was put over hard punch in the light round when he had his opponent on the ropes. In the seventh Dempsey put a jolter to Mike's stomach and evened up the battle. But the fight for the most part was terribly tame and neither party nor Dempsey looked the part of a champion—or even a coming champion.

An open glove makes a lot of noise but a knockout doesn't have to be paged.

The sale of George Smith, the young New York Giant pitcher, to Cincinnati was not entirely unexpected. McGraw has had a stiff of ten years. The release of Smith was directly due to the showing made by the pitcher this spring. Causey came to the Giants two years ago from the Texas league. He was farmed out last season to Rochester. He showed up better than Smith on his southern trip and it was a foregone conclusion that if one of the two youngsters had to go, Smith would be the one to land the pink ticket. Smith should be a help to the Reds. He came to the Giants from Columbia University, where he made a great collegiate record. He has everything but experience.

Contrary to reports, Frankie Burns, the veteran bantamweight fighter of Jersey City, has not been drafted. Burns has a wife and two children besides his mother depending upon him and he has been placed in Class 4. It is Frankie's younger brother who is in the army.

In the last two months Benny Valger, the best French bantamweight out in years, has defeated some of the best fighters in that division. Doc the best fighter in the Frenchman writes us that he is on the trail of the American champion, Fred Herdman, who is now in the east. Says Bagley: "You name me another boy who has defeated such stars as Joe Louis, Dick Loadman and King of the last month?" We can't.

The Pittsburgh team which has been showing surprising form this spring stands to lose six more players in the draft within the next month or so. Leftfielder Lee King, Shortstop, Rightfielder Casey Stengel, Pitcher Earl Hamilton, Infielder Jack Pitter and Catcher Fred Baker are the first choice men for Uncle Sam. The first choice men for Uncle Sam. The first choice men for Uncle Sam. The first choice men for Uncle Sam.

A STAR NEWSBOY

Abe Chapman. One of the star newsboys of the Chicago American has been selling Americans on the streets of Janesville this week. This lad has sold newspapers in all the principal cities of this country. His visit to Janesville is to show the newsboys here the way Americans should be sold. It means some profit to the boys of Janesville to follow his system, to learn to call out the leading news items and to hold the American out to the passerby.

It is not hard to sell Americans. The big sale in Janesville shows that. Bear in mind that in building the Evening American day by day, great cost does not enter into consideration. Its features are written by men and women who are proven experts in their various lines. Each feature is selected because of its quality.

This is Thomas Stearns, one of the enterprising young newsboys of Janesville who has made a fine record for selling Americans. When he started he was selling ten and now sells one hundred. He is ambitious and a hard worker.

Read the Chicago Evening American every day.

CITY OF PORTAGE IN BANKRUPT CONDITION; CANNOT PAY SALARIES

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., May 16.—The city of Portage is in a bankrupt condition. It has written to the state tax commission to find out if there is any method by which it may obtain relief. The letter has been turned over to the attorney general's office. It is a hard nut to crack. The city claims that it must obtain money for its governmental functions must stop. A long statement has been filed by the finance committee of Portage and signed by J. C. Lisch, R. G. Slotzer and A. R. S.

The city of Portage changed from the commission form to the aldermanic form of government during the month of April, 1918. The city and the mayor and aldermen have assumed their respective duties. Not sufficient money was raised last November to take care of the expenses of the city until November, 1918. In fact, the city at the present time is without funds and its financial condition is such that its indebtedness is equal to or has exceeded the five percent constitutional limitation. The city at the present time has no money by which it can pay the salaries of its officers, its necessary street work and labor, school teachers' salaries, wages of the men employed in the operation of the water works plant belonging to the city and the necessary supplies such as wood and coal, purchased for the proper maintenance of its public operations and functions. Having reached its constitutional limit the banks refuse to loan any money to the city for any purpose outside of the payment of teachers' salaries until the end of the school year in June, 1918. The method proposed by the banks in taking care of the teachers' salaries is to obtain an assignment from the teachers directly to the banks. However, the beginning of the new school year in September.

The city must either obtain money to continue in the performance of its governmental functions, or stop doing business of any kind. It must close its water works plant after any income it may desire from water rent, and has been extended for its operation. It must close its schools, it not having any funds with which to pay teachers' salaries and to buy wood and other supplies needed for the maintenance of its schools. At the present time coal can only be purchased on a cash basis and having no money, there will be no winter supply. The coal situation also applies to its city buildings and to the water works plant.

MANY THOUSAND CASES OF MEASLES IN STATE

Madison, Wis., May 16.—More than 4,000 cases of measles reported in this state during each of the last two months indicate a widespread and this dangerous disease. In March 4,084 measles cases were reported to the state bureau of vital statistics, and in April the number reported was 4,608. As a result of measles, whooping cough, diphtheria and scarlet fever, hundreds of children are left with weak eyes, inflammation of the ears, and generally weakened bodies which allow other diseases, such as tuberculosis, to get a foothold. It is common history to find tuberculosis develop in children following an attack of measles.

These so-called childhood diseases are often spread by mothers allowing their children to go to school and other places when they know the children are carrying a contagion. Carelessness and ignorance, says the state board, both enter into the causes of the large number of cases in the state, and are responsible for most of the deaths.

Not a single death from smallpox was reported during either month, although the total number of cases was upwards of 700. Smallpox was once much more common than measles and much more fatal. Vaccination, with isolation and disinfection as secondary measures, is credited with the extremely low mortality from this highly communicable and dangerous disease.

ADDITION PLANNED TO SCOTT TRAINING FIELD

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Belleville, Ill., May 16.—Owing to the increase in the number of cadets stationed at Scott Field, five miles from here, it has become necessary for the government to requisition an additional 165 acres for training the men in this new establishment at Mascoutah, Ill., and the work of clearing the field of crops and trees is in progress.

At present, there are approximately 900 cadets in training at Scott Field. The number of airplanes used by them is not made public but it is known that more than 100 machines are available. Twenty-four hangars have been provided, each having a capacity for three machines. No hangars will be built on the new field.

Scott Field, opened soon after war was declared, is one of the largest aviation schools in the United States.

QUANTITY PRODUCTION WATCHWORD OF GREAT SHIP BUILDING YARDS

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Detroit, May 16.—Quantity production is to be the watchword of the great Ford Shipbuilding yard which is being erected here for the construction of the United States navy "Eagles," the little vessels which, it is hoped, will help rid the seas of German U-boats.

The assembling plan has been greatly elaborated and will be applied to the building of the "Eagles." The raw material will enter one end of the plant to emerge at the other and a completed fighting craft. Each of the little vessels will be passed along by powerful machinery from one group of workmen to another and, as it passes, each group will add something to the boat.

When the last rivet has been driven in the steel hull, the boat will be picked up bodily by a powerful hydraulic lift and deposited further down the ways where skilled workmen will install the motor equipment.

Three ways have been constructed, each to hold seven of the submarine chasers. The plant is generally understood that the plant will be able to put into the water one completed "Eagle" a day and some estimates have placed the number as high as three for each twenty-four hours.

There will be no champagne christenings nor elaborate launching ceremonies. No efforts are being made to give the boats an artistic touch of artistry, the sole effort being to turn out with as great speed as possible an efficient weapon against German ruthlessness on the seas.

"If these boats will hasten the end of the frightful carnage and bring a lasting peace, there will be no occasion to worry over the cost," said Henry Ford in discussing the project. "This is your war and my war, and although we did not make it, we must see it through to a successful conclusion."

Sixty days ago the land on which the plant is being erected was a desolate marsh, a vast acreage of mud through which wandered aimlessly a sluggish river. Now it is a network of railroad tracks with locomotives running between great buildings of steel, tile and glass.

What engineers here say is one of the largest buildings in the world will be used to house at one time seven of the little vessels. It is 1,700 feet long, 300 feet wide. The building where the boats are to be assembled is fully half a mile from the Rouge river. The launching basin and the building and thence a channel is being excavated to the river.

The afternoon session was devoted to the general subject, "What we are fighting against." Germany's dream of world domination was discussed by Richard Heath Dabney, W. Morgan Shuster, John Sparrow, Anna Howard Shaw, Charles E. Elliott and Robert McElroy.

Old Lady Number 31

She recalled now no man said to her that first simple home meal: "You don't mind being poor with me, dew yer, Angy?" Now, with a silent shake of his head, he stared at her, wondering how it would seem to eat at table when her face no longer looked at him across the board, to sleep at night when her faithful hand no longer lay within reach of his own. She lifted her head, she lifted her face, the two gazing at each other over the brims, both half-dressed, half-comforted by the fact that love still remained their tonemaster after the passing of all the years. Of a sudden Angy exclaimed, "We forgot to say grace." She looked and contrite, they covered their eyes with their trembling old hands and murmured together: "Dear Lord, we thank thee this day for our daily bread."

Angy opened her eyes to find the red roses cheerfully facing her from the back of the rocking chair. A robin had hopped upon the window sill just outside the patched and rusty screen and was joyfully caroling to her his views of life. Through the window vines in which the bird was almost meshed the sunlight sifted softly into the striped, bare and lonely room. Angy felt strangely encouraged and comforted. The roses became symbolic to her of the "lilies of the field" which toil not, neither do they spin; the robin was one of the "two sparrows sold for a farthing, and one of them shall not fall to the ground without your Father," while the sunlight seemed to call out to the little old lady who hoped and believed and loved much: "Fear ye not therefore. Ye are of more value than many sparrows."

When Itching Stops

There is one safe, dependable treatment that relieves itching torture and skin irritation almost instantly and that cleanses and soothes the skin. Ask any druggist for a 35-cent bottle of zemo and apply it as directed. Soon you will find that irritations, pimples, blackheads, eczema, blotches, ringworm and similar skin troubles will disappear. A little zemo, the penetrating, satisfying liquid, is all that is needed, for it banishes most skin eruptions, makes the skin soft, smooth and healthy. The E. W. Rice Co., Cleveland, O.

a creaking, old, unusually large toy express wagon which he had bought at some forgotten auction long ago. The husband and wife passed into the garden between borders of boxwood, beyond which nodded the heads of Angy's carefully tended, outdoor "children"—her roses, her snowballs, her sweet-smelling syringas, her wax-like bleeding-hearts and her shrub of bridal-wreath. "Just a minute," she murmured, as Abe would have hastened on to the gate. She bent her proud head and kissed with furtive, half-ashamed passion a fluffy white spray of the bridal-wreath. Now overtopping the husband's silk hat, the shrub had not come so high as his knee when they two had planted it nearly a half-century ago. "You're mine!" Angy's heart cried out to the shrub and to every growing thing in the garden. "You're mine. I planted you, tended you, loved you into growing. You're all the children I ever had, and I'm leaving you." But the old wife did not pluck a single flower, for she could never bear to see a blossom wither in her hand, while all she said aloud was: "I'm glad 'twas

CHAPTER II.

"Good-by."

When the last look of parting had been given to the old kitchen and the couple passed out of doors, hushed and trembling, they presented an incongruously brave, gala-day appearance. Both were dressed in their best. To be sure, Abraham's Sunday suit had long since become his only, everyday suit as well, but he wore his Sabbath-day hat, a beaver of ancient design, with an air that cast its reflection over all his apparel. Angelina had on a black silk gown as shiny as the freshly polished stove she was leaving in her kitchen—a gown which testified from its voluminous hem to the soft yellow net at the throat that Angelina was as neat a mender and darning as could be found in Suffolk county.

A black silk bonnet snuggled close to her head, from under its brim peeping a single pink rose. Every spring for ten years Angelina had renewed the youth of this rose by treating its petals with the tender red dye of a budding oak.

Under the pink rose a soft pink flush bloomed on either of the old lady's cheeks. Her eyes flashed with unconquerable pride, and her square, firm chin she held very high; for now, indeed, she felt with terror of what "folks would say" to this home leaving, and it was a bright June afternoon, too clear for an umbrella with which to hide one's face from prying neighbors, too late in the day for a sunshade.

Angy tucked the green-black affair which served them as both under her arm and swung Abe's figured old carpetbag in her hand with the manner of one setting out on a pleasant journey. Abe, though resting heavily on his stout, crooked cane, dragged behind him Angy's little horsehair trunk upon

Mrs. Holmes that bought in the house. They say she's a great hand ter dig in the garden."

Angy's voice faltered. Abe did not answer. Something had caused a swimming before his eyes which he did not wish his wife to see; so he let fall the handle of the express wagon and, bending his slow back, plucked a sprig of "old-man." Though he could not have expressed his sentiments in words, the garden brought poignant recollections of the hopes and promises which had thrown their rose color about the young days of his marriage. His hopes had never blossomed into fulfillment. His promises to the little wife had been choked by the weeds of his own inefficiency. Worse than this, the bursting into bloom of seeds of selfish rockiness in himself was what had turned the garden of their life into an arid waste. And now, in their dry and withered old age, he and Angy were being torn up by the roots, flung as so much rubbish by the roadside.

"Mother, I be dretful sorry ter take yew away from your posies," muttered Abraham as he arose with his green sprig in his hand.

With shaking fingers, Angy sought a pin hidden beneath her basque. "Father, shall I pin yer 'old-man' in yer buttonhole?" she quavered. Then as he stooped for her to arrange the posy, she whispered: "I wouldn't care, 'cept for what folks must say. Let's hurry before any one sees us. I told everybody that we wa'n't a-goin' ter break up till tomorrow mornin'."

Fortunately, there was a way across lots to the Old Ladies' home, an unfrequented by-path over a field and through a bit of woodland, which would bring the couple almost unobserved to a side gate.

Under ordinary circumstances Angelina would never have taken this path; for it exposed her carefully patched and newly polished shoes to scratches, her fragile, worn silk skirt and stiff, white petticoat to brambles. Moreover, the dragging of the loaded little wagon was more difficult here for Abraham. But they both preferred the narrower, rougher way to facing the curious eyes of all Shoreville now, the pitying windows of the village street.

As the couple came to the edge of the woodland, they turned with one accord and looked back for the last glimpse of the home. Dashing gold-red against the kitchen window flamed the afternoon sunlight.

"Look a' that!" Angy cried eagerly, as one who beholds a promise in the skies. "Just see, father, we couldn't 'a' made out that winder this far at all if the sun hadn't struck it jest so. I declare! It seems almost as if we could see the rocker, tew. It's tew bad, Abe, that we had ter let yer old rocker go. D' yew remember—" she laid her hand on his arm, and lifted her gaze, growing clouded and wistful, to his face. "When we bought the chair, we thought maybe some day 'd be rocking a little baby in it. 'Twas then, yew ricollec', we sorter got in the habit of callin' each other 'father' an' 'mother.' I wonder if the young 'uns had come—"

"Let's hurry," interrupted Abe, almost gruffly. "Let's hurry."

They stumbled forward with bowed heads in silence, until of a sudden they were startled by a surprised hail of recognition, and looked up to find themselves confronted by a bent and gray old man, a village character, a harmless, slightly demented public charge known as "Ishmael" or "Captain Rover."

"Whar yew goin', Cap'n Rover?"

The old couple had drawn back at the sight of the gentle vagabond, and Angy clutched at her husband's arm, her heart contracting at the thought that he, too, had become a pauper. "I'm a-takin' my wife ter the hum," Abe answered, and would have passed on, shrinking from the sight of himself as reflected in poor Ishmael.

But the "innocent" placed himself in their path.

"Yew ain't a-goin' ter jine 'em tew?" he bantered.

Abe forced a laugh to his lips in response.

"No, no, I'm goin' over ter Yaphank ter board on the county."

Again the couple would have passed on, their faces flushed, their eyes lowered, had not Ishmael flung out one hand to detain them while he plucked the other hurriedly into his pocket.

"Here," He drew out a meager handful of nickels and pennies, his vacant smile grown wistful. "Here, take it, Cap'n Rover. It's all I got. I can't count it myself, but yew can. Don't yew think it's enough ter set yew up in business, so yew won't have ter go ter the poorhouse? The poorhouse is a bad place. I was there last winter. I don't like the poorhouse."

He rambled on of the poorhouse, Angy, panting for breath, one hand against the smothering pain at her heart, was trying, with the other, to drag "father" along. "Father" was shaking his head at ishmael, at the proffered nickels and pennies—shaking his head and chokking. At length he found his voice, and was able to smile at his would-be benefactor with even the ghost of a twinkle in his eye.

"Much obliged, Cap'n Rover; but yew keep yer money for terbaccy. I ain't so high-toned as yew. I'll take real comfort at the poorhouse. S'long; thank yer. S'long."

Ishmael went on his way muttering to himself, unhappily jingling his rejected alms; while Angy and Abe resumed their journey.

As they came to the gate of the Old Ladies' home Angy seized hold of her husband's arm, and looking up into his face pleaded earnestly:

"Father, let's take the hundred dollars for a family tombston' an' go ter the poorhouse tergether!"

He shook her off almost roughly and lifted the latch of the gate.

"Folks 'd say we was crazy, mother."

There was no one in sight as he dragged in the express cart and laid down the handle. Before him was a long, clean-swept path ending apparently in a mass of shrubbery; to the left was a field of sweet corn reaching to the hedge; to the right a strong and sturdy growth of pole lima beans; and just within the entrance, beneath the sweeping plumes of a weeping willow tree, was a shabby but inviting green bench.

Abe's glance wandered from the bench to his wife's face. Angy could not lift her eyes to him; with bowed head she was watching and unlatching the gate through which he must pass. He looked at the sun and thoughtfully made reckon of the time. There were still two hours before he could take the train which—

"Let's go set down a spell afore—" he faltered—"afore we say good-by."

She made no answer. She told herself over and over that she must—simply must—stop that "all-of-a-tremble" feeling which was going on inside of her. She stepped from the gate to the bench blindly, with Abe's hand on her arm, though, still blindly, with exaggerated care she placed his carpetbag on the grass beside her.

He laid down his cane, took off his high hat and wiped his brow. He looked at her anxiously. Still she could not lift her blurred eyes, nor could she check her trembling.

Seeing how she shook, he passed his arm around her shoulder. He murmured something—what, neither he nor she knew—but the love of his youth spoke in the murmur, and again fell the silence.

Dinner Stories

Douglas Fairbanks told the other day a Christmas story. "A poor chap from the country," he said, "took his best girl to a fashionable Broadway restaurant for their Christmas dinner, and in his ignorance committed gaucheerie on gaucheerie."

The bill of fare was in French, and the chap pointed to an item on it and said huskily:

"Then the waiter handed him a napkin. The chap looked at it carefully, frowned, got up, spread it on his chair and sat on it."

"The waiter, taking pity on him, said:

"Will you have the table d'hôte or à la carte, sir?"

"Both," said the chap, coughing. "Both, with plenty of gravy."

They had been engaged three years, but there seemed no indications that the good ship matrimony was hovering in the offing. She was getting restless, but when she touched the subject he dexterously turned the conversation.

Recently he turned it off to physiology, a science of which he was a student.

"Yes," he said, airily, "it is a strange but well-authenticated fact that the whole human body changes every seven years. You, my dear, are Miss Jones now. In seven years you will have changed completely. Not a particle of your present self will be left; but all the same, you will still be Miss Jones."

"Oh, I shall!" said the angry damsel, tugging away at the third finger of her left hand. "I assure you I won't let it have to marry a milk-maid! Of all the impudence—Here, take your ring and I never want to see you again."

Agriculture Stands First.

At the head of all sciences and arts, at the head of all civilization and progress, stands not militarism, the science that kills, nor commerce, the science that accumulates wealth, but agriculture, the mother of all industry and the maintainer of human life.

—James A. Garfield.

OH! THAT AWFUL BACKACHE IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

An unhealthy body, and the unhappiness and misery which follow, may be prevented by ordinary judgment and care. Keep your stomach and kidneys in shape, and you will have good health. The kidney's work is to throw off the poisonous matters which enter the body. If they perform this work regularly and automatically the other organs will take care of themselves. Diseased conditions of the bladder or kidneys are indicated by nervousness, sleeplessness, that tired, worn-out feeling, dizziness, nausea, backache, limbo, rheumatism, pain in the lower abdomen, many so-called "female troubles," severe pain and discomfort when urinating, bloody, cloudy and stringy urine, too frequent or suppressed passages. All these are nature's signals to warn you of diseased kidneys or bladder, which may lead to fatal Bright's disease. Don't wait until the danger is upon you. Go to your druggist at once and get a trial box of GOLD MEDAL Haeitem Oil Capsules. They are made of the pure, original imported Haeitem Oil, the kind your great-grandfather used. About two capsules each day will keep you toned up and feeling fine. Money refunded if they do not help you. But remember to ask for the imported GOLD MEDAL brand. In sealed packages.

how the people of France told the soldiers not to avenge the crimes by doing like unto them. He told of how the Hun had been accused of everything under the sun but fair and humane and that they would never be accused of those traits.

In glowing terms he then told of the sacrifices his country, Canada, had made since the beginning of the war. He stated that they have already sent 40,000 men to the front and that at the present time they have 40,000 returned soldiers in Canada.

Exhibited slides which were awarded to the man who sank the Lusitania and presented the Janesville Chamber of Commerce with the medals that had been made for the great vessel and the men who saved it. He told of the sinking of the great vessel and the men who saved it. He told of the sinking of the great vessel and the men who saved it.

He then attacked the pro-German and stated that there is no such thing as a German-American. He stated that a man is either German or he is an American. He told of the soldiers who were killed and the soldiers who were killed.

He spoke also of the wonderful riches of this country and how generous the United States was in loaning money to the allies. He then told of the soldiers who were killed and the soldiers who were killed.

He spoke also of the wonderful riches of this country and how generous the United States was in loaning money to the allies. He then told of the soldiers who were killed and the soldiers who were killed.

Mr. Adam Bode, ex-congressman of Minnesota, was the next speaker and in his opening told of the great things that had been done for the United States. He told of the soldiers who were killed and the soldiers who were killed.

He spoke also of the wonderful riches of this country and how generous the United States was in loaning money to the allies. He then told of the soldiers who were killed and the soldiers who were killed.

He told of how the people of the United States had been thinking in three different ways when they should have been thinking in the same direction. He stated that he knew when the war broke out and how the people of the United States had been thinking in three different ways when they should have been thinking in the same direction.

He spoke also of the wonderful riches of this country and how generous the United States was in loaning money to the allies. He then told of the soldiers who were killed and the soldiers who were killed.

He again brought the audience to an uproar when he stated that the United States had threatened to go to war with Germany and the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

He urged the people now to think of peace at this time, but to keep in mind that the more boys we get into the war the more boys we will need. He told of how any man who attempted to make a dollar now through the war would be a traitor to his country.

Col. Charles Alonzo Simmons, representing the American City Bureau, which is in charge of the campaign, was called upon to make some announcements and to outline the next steps in the campaign which will provide Janesville with a thoroughly up-to-date and efficient commercial organization, ready for the tasks which may be undertaken, according to the wishes of the membership.

"During the past ten days," said Col. Simmons, "you, together with other citizens of the community, have been wondering just what the next Chamber of Commerce is to do, and you have been helping to establish its lines of activities, by filling out the Write-It-Down blanks, which have been distributed. Of course it is rather difficult, except in general terms, to outline what the new organization will undertake, in fact it would be unwise to commit the organization to any policy, until all the suggestions which have come in, and those still to be received, are tabulated, and carefully analyzed."

"You can get your organization equipped, along the latest approved lines, for the tasks which confront it. You can be prepared. Let me tell you of a city which was prepared. William Ford brought in to me this week a copy of this week's Collier's, and pointed to an article on the way in which Rochester, N. Y., responded to the appeal of the government that it handle big gun making."

"Rochester is a city which not so many years ago referred to the interior of a city which was prepared. William Ford brought in to me this week a copy of this week's Collier's, and pointed to an article on the way in which Rochester, N. Y., responded to the appeal of the government that it handle big gun making."

"Then a new group of men took an interest in affairs, and they began to put up a much needed building, and that uncovered the plans of another group and a second one was started. The town gossip said that the city was going broke, but those who were wise began to watch the operations with renewed interest. The Chamber of Commerce associated a strong group of men, who gave freely of their time and money, for the things that should be done."

"The city authorities began to spend more money on their parks and recreational problems, and the schools began to improve much to the dismay and discomfort of the pessimists. It seemed as though a new spirit had taken hold of the city. Men didn't have time to pay attention to the walls of those who said that things couldn't be done; they were so busy doing things that they let the walls of the dyed-in-the-wool pessimists go unheeded."

"The town began to grow. New factories moved in. Workers came with them. New houses began to be built, and buildings in the center of the city were changed over at huge expense, to take care of the new demands upon the business section for office and business room."

"And all this time, a wise administration of the Chamber of Commerce was making that body a real influence in city circles. It was a real, and guiding force, and it kept abreast of public sentiment, leading the way, sometimes on the popular side of a question, and sometimes on the unpopular side, but always taking the public into its confidence. It built wisely, and well."

"It is for this reason that you are asked to join the Chamber of Commerce, to give aid to the government, to take care of the popular side of a question, and sometimes on the unpopular side, but always taking the public into its confidence. It built wisely, and well."

"That is what a Chamber of Commerce is—a union of groups of a community, all working for the general good of the community. It is service, and the kind that brings results in concrete ways."

"To establish a Chamber of Commerce which represents the entire community, there must be perfect understanding. This is particularly true as regards the activities of the organization. On any campaign, which has been found most effective in establishing that confidence and understanding is the use of a Members Council."

By means of a chart, Col. Simmons then illustrated the organization of a members' council, and showed how it has much to do, with that activity, which results in great gains to the community."

"Those present at the dinner were urged to express their opinions on Write-It-Down blanks, which were distributed, and to the needs of the community, and the things which should be taken up for the good of Janesville. Many of these have already been received. Every one is asked to give his or her opinions, along these lines."

Col. Simmons made it plain that the organization of teams for the campaign was one of the best line-up he had seen in any campaign.

"You have eleven active team captains, supported by ten men who are willing to give a total of two hours a day, for the benefit of Janesville. Col. Simmons, and these captains and workers are to gather at the Myers hotel on Friday at noon to go over the plans for the campaign, and to become thoroughly familiar with their duties for the campaign next week."

"I am absolutely convinced that this campaign is going to be a success, and that you will bring in a total of more than 400 members. You have faith in your city, and these team workers are thoroughly enthusiastic. Through a series of group meetings, many of the members of the teams have seen the working plans for the new Chamber of Commerce and they realize what can, and should be done in this community."

Johnstown, May 16.—Mrs. James Stewart is improving from her recent operation at Mercy Hospital, where she was operated on for a serious case of the gall bladder.

Dr. D. T. Nuzum was called to the Herman Schlarke home to attend Mrs. Schlarke, who is not improving and remains very weak.

Mrs. Mark Calkins received first prize in the guessing contest at the Red Cross Social.

Mrs. Wm. Brumman will entertain the East Red Cross Group Friday afternoon, May 24.

One hundred and fifty enjoyed the Red Cross social at the McFarland home Wednesday evening. Miss Florence Hull rendered several pleasing instrumental selections on the piano following a musical chorus of thirty voices all singing different songs at the same time under the directions of Mrs. George Mahwinney. The next on the program, little Lizzie Brumman, three years old sang America. Marion Peterson read a poem of a soldier boy. The Red Cross has over $30.00 to add to the treasury.

Johnstown, May 16.—There will be a republican convention in the city of Madison early in June. This is admitted by Governor E. L. Phillips. The date of the convention has not yet been decided.

The announcement that this convention is to be held, will foreclose any announcement of the candidacy of Governor Philipp for re-election, should he be planning to enter the field. It has been generally assumed that Gov. Philipp would make a statement within a short time, declaring whether he would be a candidate for re-election or not. It is now apparent from political activities at the capital that the governor intends to delay any announcement until after the convention is held. This will let the convention settle matters. The fact is, however, that Governor Philipp will be the candidate for governor, if endorsed by this convention.

Similarly no announcement will be made by Attorney General Spencer Haven as to whether he will be a candidate for re-election as attorney general. If the convention endorses him he will be a candidate.

Governor Philipp had intended to be absent from the city for the remainder of the week. He intended to go to Philadelphia to attend the war conference in Pennsylvania. The illness of a close friend of the governor, however, made it impossible for him to be absent at this time.
